WHAT WE DO

"The Army Field Historian's most critical task is collecting and retaining the historical materials and the concurrent historical reporting of Army operations and actions.

The accomplishment of these tasks ensures that Army history is documented, researched and written and presented to the Army and the nation.

As much as possible, historical materials and reports present an unbiased and comprehensive set of primary materials that help both the field historian and later Army historians researching and writing an accurate, objective and full accounting of operations, decisions and actions.

Anything less does a disservice to the Army and the nation."

ATP 1-20 para. 5-1.
