WASHINGTON, D.C. 1986
Foreword

Aviation units, although they belong to one of the newer branches of the Army, have compiled an impressive record of achievement. From the organization of the earliest separate units in the Korean War era through an outstanding record in Vietnam and the recent achievement of independent branch status, Army aviation has become an integral part of today's combined arms doctrine. The lineages, honors, and heraldic items in this volume should increase the historical awareness of aviation soldiers and enhance their pride in their units. A positive sense of unit identity and enthusiasm is an intangible but significant factor in successful military organizations. It is our hope that this volume will contribute to the esprit de corps of Army aviation units.

Colonel, Infantry
Acting Chief of Military History
Preface

The inception of organic Army aviation in World War II and the Korean War era can be traced to the growing realization that the ground commander needed aviation resources directly under his control and always responsive to his needs as an integral part of the organizational assets provided to accomplish his mission. There had been aero squadrons at the corps and army level in World War I, and observation squadrons had been provided in the 1920–1921 division tables of organization. These units and personnel ultimately went under the control of the Army Air Corps, in 1930 in the Regular Army and in the 1940 call-up of the National Guard. Following successful experiences in the 1941 maneuvers, the Army began using light, fixed-wing aircraft in 1942 for artillery forward observation, liaison, and reconnaissance. Tactical air support and aerial troop and supply transport in World War II were provided by Army Air Corps units, which later became Air Force units. With the establishment of the Air Force as a separate service in 1947, the coordination of aviation resources to provide direct support to ground operations became problematic. In response, the Army began cautious development of its own aviation assets, building on its World War II experience with light planes and experimenting with early rotary-wing aircraft.

Army aviation as a separate organizational entity emerged in the period 1950 to 1954, with the organization and activation of the first units, some provisional and some permanent. By January 1953 four transportation helicopter companies, later redesignated as aviation units, had been organized, and a number of provisional helicopter ambulance detachments were operational.

The aviation designation first appeared during implementation of the Pentomic concept in 1957. Aviation companies were assigned as organic elements of Regular Army infantry and armored divisions and to the 82d Airborne Division. Aviation companies organic to divisions in the Army Reserve were constituted and activated in 1958 and 1959. Beginning in 1959, aviation companies were added to National Guard divisions. Under the ROAD (Reorganization Objective Army Divisions) concept in 1963, these divisional aviation companies were expanded into battalions, consisting of a general support company and an airmobile company. The general support companies assumed the aerial surveillance, reconnaissance and liaison, and utility missions of the old divisional aviation companies, while the airmobile companies, augmented with armed escort helicopters, performed the mission of the old transportation light helicopter companies—the air movement of troops and materiel. The 11th Air Assault Division was also established in 1963 as a test for the ideas developed the previous year by the U.S. Army Tactical Mobility Requirements
Ultimately, only two divisions ever operated tactically under the airmobility concept. The 11th Air Assault Division was inactivated in 1965, and the 1st Cavalry Division and the 101st Airborne Division were reorganized, with organic aviation groups of three battalions of rotary-wing aircraft and a fixed-wing aviation company. Nevertheless, the studies and tests the Howze Board carried out, examining the use of aviation to enhance mobility, had an important impact on the tremendous expansion of the role of Army aviation that took place during the Vietnam War.

The uniquely high demands placed on aviation resources by the nature of operations in Vietnam led to the constitution and activation of a large number of nondivisional battalions to supplement aviation resources organic to divisions. This, in turn, led to the constitution and activation of a number of nondivisional aviation groups and of the 1st Aviation Brigade to provide needed levels of command and control. After the Vietnam War, the capabilities of the armed helicopter continued to be developed with new emphasis placed on the role of armed helicopters as tank destroyers.

The range of missions assigned to aviation units today, from reconnaissance and transport to fire support and antitank combat, testify to the importance organic aviation has assumed in U.S. Army doctrine and operations, despite its relatively brief history. In April 1983 Secretary of the Army John O. Marsh, Jr., approved plans to establish aviation as a separate branch of the Army in order to achieve “full integration of Army aviation into the combined arms team.”

Aviation as a branch includes most of the units in the Army that use fixed- or rotary-wing aircraft to perform their missions. This volume gathers in compact form the official historical records of aviation units in order to perpetuate their traditions, honors, and heraldic entitlements. It includes the lineage and honors of the 1st Aviation Brigade and of all Regular Army, Army Reserve, and Army National Guard aviation groups and battalions as of 1 May 1983. Air traffic control units have not been included.

Not all Army units using aircraft to perform their functions carry an aviation designation. They have therefore not been included in this compilation. For example, the heritage of aerial forward observers in World War II and aerial rocket artillery, which used armed helicopters in Vietnam to perform fire support missions, is preserved in the Field Artillery branch. Former aviation units, such as the 224th Aviation Battalion (now the 224th Military Intelligence Battalion), that have been converted to other branches will appear in those volumes pertaining to their current designations.

The lineage and honors record of a unit is an outline history, and the official certificate attesting to that history, prepared in the Organizational History Branch of the U.S. Army Center of Military History, is a highly stylized document. The unit lineages in this book are adapted from the official certificates. The lineage begins with the official designation of the unit, followed by its special designation, if approved by the Center. The events in the life of a unit recorded as part of its past are restricted to a few specific actions, such as activation, inactivation, and redesignation. The data has been compressed to save space, which accounts for the technical language used. A glossary appears at the end of the volume to assist the reader in understanding these terms. Campaigns and decorations for all units are listed in each lineage. General orders announcing designations are shown parenthetically.

The Organizational History Branch is responsible for the determination of official unit lineages and honors, and the lineages that appear in this volume are the result of research done by many members of the branch, past and present. Mr. Wayne M. Dzwonchyk brought all the lineages up to date and compiled the unit bibliographies with the help of Mr. Charles E. Dornbusch's comprehensive bibliography entitled Histories, Personal Narratives, United States Army (Cornwallville, New York: Hope Farm Press, 1967) and the U.S. Army Military History Institute's similar work compiled by Colonel George S. Pappas entitled United States Army Unit Histories (Carlisle Barracks, Pennsylvania, 1971). The U.S. Army Aviation Digest also proved a valuable source of information about many units. While it does not appear on the unit bibliographies, Mr. Shelby L. Stanton's volume Vietnam Order of Battle (Washington, D.C.: U.S. News Books, 1981) also contains information about aviation units in Vietnam. In the compilation of the bibliographies, considerable assistance was rendered by Mr. Stephen Everett and Miss Dana Purdy. The manuscript was typed by Mrs. Reda Robinson and edited by Mrs. Joycelyn M. Canery.

Descriptions of coat of arms, distinctive insignia, and flag devices approved for aviation units are included with the lineages. These descriptions, as well as the color illustrations of the heraldic items, were furnished by The Institute of Heraldry, U.S. Army. The Organizational History Branch is especially grateful to Dr. Opal V. Landrum, Miss Nadine Russell, and Miss Nuala Barry for their time and effort spent in assisting in the publication of this volume. In some instances, the text relating the heraldic items approved for the units is not as comprehensive as in the original letters of approval, amendment, or redesignation sent to the organization. Minor changes in heraldic material have been made to meet the need for brevity in this volume. In addition to the color illustrations, a brief account of the evolution of these items is included.

Since the Center of Military History is responsible for the determination and publication of unit lineage and honors under Army Regulations 870–5, comments are invited and should be addressed to the Center at Washington, D.C. 20314–0200.

Heraldic Items

Heraldic items for Army organizations reflect history, tradition, ideals, and accomplishments. Coats of arms, historic badges, and distinctive insignia have been so designed that each is distinctive to the organization for which approved. They serve as identifying devices and as an inspiration and an incentive for unity of purpose.

A coat of arms (or a historic badge) and a distinctive insignia are authorized for each regiment; coats of arms and distinctive insignia also are authorized for fixed battalions (those with organic companies). Distinctive insignia are authorized for flexible battalions (those organized with a headquarters only) and groups. The designs of these items are based on the lineages and battle honors of the organizations.

While the custom of bearing various symbols on shields, helmets, and flags existed in antiquity, heraldry was not introduced until the Middle Ages. The use of heraldic devices became more prevalent with the increased use of armor and the requirements for insignia to assist in distinguishing friend from foe on the battlefield. The symbols selected for use on these devices were commemorative of incidents of valor, mythological beasts, and, later, other symbols to which specific symbolism was ascribed. These heraldic bearings were placed on a surcoat worn over the armor, from which the term coat of arms was derived. Gradually a formal system of heraldry evolved, complete with rules for design, use, and display. These rules or principles were for the purpose of facilitating designs that would be distinctive and easily recognized. Present-day heraldic devices stem from this heraldic system established during the twelfth and thirteenth centuries.

A complete coat of arms consists of a shield, a crest, and a motto. The shield, the most important portion of the arms, contains the field or ground on which the charges are placed. The crest as originally used was placed upon the top of the helmet of the chief or leader to enable his followers to distinguish him during battle. The crest is placed upon a wreath of six skeins or twists composed of the principal metal and principal color of the shield, alternately, in the order named. This wreath (or targe) represents the piece of cloth which the knight twisted around the top of his helmet, and by means of which the actual crest was attached. Mottoes have been in use longer than coats of arms, many of the older ones having originated from war cries. They usually are of an idealistic nature and sometimes allude to a well-known event in the history of the organization. The historic badges (authorized for some regiments in lieu of coats of arms) are of a symbolic composition and include mottoes, but they are not shield-shaped.

The elements of the coat of arms or the historic badge, as applicable, are embroidered on the organizational flag (color)—the central element of which is the American eagle. The shield of the coat of arms is on the eagle's breast; a scroll bearing the motto is held in his beak; and the crest is placed above his head. On flags of those organizations which have historic badges in lieu of coats of arms, the badge is placed above the eagle's head and the scroll bearing the motto is in his beak.

Distinctive insignia manufactured in metal and enamel are worn on the uniform by all personnel of the regiment, battalion, or group. The insignia of the regiments and separate battalions usually are based on elements of the design of the coat of arms or historic badge. Flexible battalion and group insignia (often referred to as badges) are not shield-shaped; however, they are of a symbolic composition and include mottoes.

The distinctive insignia is the basis for the flag device of each flexible battalion. It is appliqued on the center of the organization's distinguishing flag.

The distinctive insignia, organizational colors and distinguishing flags are interlinked and these heraldic items today, as in the past, serve to distinguish specific organizations and their members.

Shoulder Sleeve Insignia

Description: On an ultramarine shield arched at top a golden orange swooping hawk head to left and wings elevated in front of a vertical unsheathed sword, point upward throughout with white blade and red hilt all within a golden orange border.

Symbolism: Ultramarine blue and golden orange are the colors used for aviation units. Gold and red are the colors of the Republic of Vietnam and of the shoulder sleeve insignia of the U.S. Military Assistance Command, Vietnam and U.S. Army, Vietnam, the commands under which the brigade was formed and served in armed conflict. The hawk in flight preparing to strike its prey symbolizes aviation's impact on modern ground warfare. It was adopted as the symbol of the new aviation capabilities during the initial phase of air assault concept testing in 1963. The crusader's sword, taken from the shoulder sleeve insignia of U.S. Military Assistance Command, Vietnam, identifies the origin and mission of the brigade in Vietnam. The rapid increase in aviation units in Vietnam dictated formation of the aviation brigade to command multiple units.

Distinctive Insignia (Badge)

Description: A gold distinctive insignia consisting of a swooping hawk with elevated wings.

Symbolism: Gold is one of the colors of the Republic of Vietnam, and of the shoulder sleeve insignia of the U.S. Military Assistance Command, Vietnam and U.S. Army, Vietnam, the commands under which the brigade was formed and served in armed conflict. The hawk in flight preparing to strike its prey symbolizes aviation's impact on modern ground warfare.

DISTINCTIVE INSIGNIA (BADGE)

Description: A silver distinctive insignia with a blue shakefork reversed, the three arms of equal length and couped, the vertical arm between two silver wings of five feathers each, the tips of feathers inward and surmounted by a golden orange arrowhead, a silver scroll in base passing over the throat of the arrowhead and over and back of the ends of the two lower arms of the shakefork, and bearing the motto “Will Do” in blue letters.

Symbolism: The wings and the shakefork, which simulate the rotor blades of a helicopter, refer to the aviation mission of the organization, the ten feathers in the wings alluding to its numerical designation, and the arrowhead placed over the rotor blades and wings to the major assault function of flying (carrying) troops into combat. The motto “Will Do” reflects the unit’s determination and success in accomplishing its objectives. The colors ultramarine blue and golden orange are traditionally associated with aviation units.

Description: A silver distinctive insignia consisting of a blue oval, behind a silver eagle displayed with an orange arrow erect charged on each wing, below a silver scroll inscribed “We Make the Difference” in black letters.

Symbolism: The eagle is used to symbolize the superior flying ability of the 11th Aviation Group; the wings displayed with claws extended represent the unit’s outstanding record of revolutionizing airmobile warfare. The arrows further allude to speed in flight, while one arrow on each wing gives numerical distinction to the 11th Aviation Group. Ultramarine blue and golden orange are the colors associated with aviation units.

Symbolism: A mythological phoenix symbol, depicted in heraldry as a demieagle with wings displayed rising out of flames of fire and said to represent hope and life eternal, is the basis for this design. Thus the blue wings symbolize the Group’s aircraft rising triumphant out of the tempering fires of combat, signifying hope and the continuity of life throughout hardships. The Aviation colors, blue and orange, are represented in the wings and flames and the total number of the tongues of flame and the wings equal the numerical designation of the group.

Description: A gold distinctive insignia consisting of a black tower masoned gold, turreted red, overall an upright winged sword, blade and hilt gold and wings white; all above a blue scroll inscribed "Flying Mustangs" in gold letters, the center part of the scroll surmounting the hilt of the sword.

Symbolism: The upright sword from the shoulder sleeve insignia of United States Army, Europe, with the addition of wings for aviation, stands for air defense and also denotes that the initial service of the group was under that command. The number of feathers in each wing, i.e., fifteen, alludes to the organization's numerical designation. The heraldic tower, representing an aviation control tower, refers to the organization's mission of command and control of aviation units and battalions. Black, red, and gold, the national colors of the Federal Republic of Germany, refer to the activation of the group in that country. Ultramarine blue and golden orange are the colors of aviation units; red, white, and blue refer to the United States.

The purple and black areas are surmounted by a gold falcon's head all within a light blue circle with the lower portion covered by a gold scroll inscribed in black letters, “Born in Battle.”

Symbolism: The falcon's head symbolizes the strong combat flying capabilities of the unit. The purple mountains refer to those in the northernmost part of South Vietnam where the unit was activated. The three mountain peaks symbolize the threefold effort of the United States, South Vietnam, and the Free World military forces to win freedom and secure peace. The black area in base alludes to the flares and flashes of battle. Also, gold and red are the national colors of the Republic of Vietnam. The blue annulet stands for the continuous and courageous efforts of the group.

Symbolism: The color ultramarine blue is associated with aviation units. Gold and red, the colors of the national flag of the Republic of Vietnam, allude to the activation and initial combat service of the 17th Aviation Group in Vietnam. The eagle, mythological guardian of the element air, refers to aviation power; the sword stands for combat. The sword is white for the purity of the cause of freedom for which it is raised. Symbolism: The triangular shape symbolizes the Mekong delta where the 164th Aviation Group was activated and where it conducted its operations. The concentric triangles refer to the unit’s growth in its primary mission, to give support. Red and yellow are the colors used by the Republic of Vietnam, while the swooping silver hawk refers to the combat airpower of the unit. The color blue is used by aviation units; it also alludes to the ultimate goal of peaceful blue skies.

DISTINCTIVE INSIGNIA (BADGE)

Description: A silver distinctive insignia consisting of a pair of white wings on an inverted blue chevron, overall a silver sword; all interlaced with an elliptical silver band so that the wings and the arms of the chevron extend over and beyond the outer edge of the band and the point and hilt of the sword under and beyond; the upper part of the band inscribed “Guide” and the lower part “Follow, Safeguard” all in blue letters.

Symbolism: The chevron supporting the wings stands for the group’s mission of aviation support. The crusader’s sword is taken from the shoulder sleeve insignia of the United States Army Military Assistance Command, Vietnam. It refers to the activation and initial combat service of the group in Vietnam. In addition, the sword simulates a “1”; the sword and the inverted chevron together represent the numeral “6” (Roman numeral VI) and the inverted chevron represents the numeral 5 (Roman numeral V); all refer to the organization’s designation. Ultramarine blue is the color used for aviation units.

COAT OF ARMS

Shield: Per bend nebuly argent and azure, in base a mullet of eleven points of the first and in chief an alerion gules.

Crest: On a wreath of the colors, argent and azure, issuant out of a cloud proper, four crossed lightning bolts their points in base, two at center gules between two gold.

Motto: Super Primum (Above the First).

Symbolism: Ultramarine blue is traditionally associated with aviation units. The alerion (a heraldic eagle without beak or talon) is symbolic of flight and further suggests the fixed wing variety of aircraft. The star, a symbol of achievement, also represents rotary-winged aircraft. The nebuly partition line is suggestive of clouds and sky.

The lightning bolts out of a cloud are suggestive of the mission and capabilities of an aviation battalion in combat. Yellow and scarlet, the colors of the Republic of Vietnam, refer to the unit's service in eleven campaigns there. Two awards of the Meritorious Unit Commendation are represented by the scarlet lightning bolts at center, and the two yellow bolts connote awards of the Republic of Vietnam Cross of Gallantry with Palm and the Republic of Vietnam Civil Action Honor Medal, First Class.

Motto: Vigilantia Aeterna (Eternal Vigilance).

Symbolism: Ultramarine blue is traditionally associated with aviation units. The curved nebuly partition line is a heraldic representation of clouds. The triangular wedge rising above the line stands for Mount Rainier with its peak above the clouds. Mount Rainier is a landmark of the unit's place of activation. The golden eagle's wings above the peak and clouds refer to the battalion's aviation function. The oriental dragon symbolizes the unit's wartime service in Vietnam and participation in eleven campaigns. Red refers to the Meritorious Unit Commendation; the rice alludes to the Republic of Vietnam Civil Action Honor Medal, First Class, and the palm represents the awards of the Republic of Vietnam Cross of Gallantry with Palm.

Crest: On a wreath of the colors, argent and azure, a hawk's head erased proper gorged by a collar azure, rims studded or and charged with a fleur-de-lis gold.

Motto: Acute and Alert.

Symbolism: Ultramarine blue and golden orange are the colors traditionally associated with aviation units. The wings allude to aviation; the fleam, an heraldic lancet, represents the combat activities of the unit as a reconnaissance troop during World War II. It is also symbolic of the numerical designation and the five battle honors awarded the unit for service in World War II. The hawk, noted for its keen eyesight and hunting instincts, represents the unit's "baptism of fire" as the 5th Reconnaissance Troop, Mechanized. The Normandy campaign is symbolized by the blue collar and gold fleur-de-lis. The hawk is particularly apt as it complements the unit's capabilities and history.

Symbolism: The winged sword refers to the combat mission of the battalion. The equilateral triangle (or delta) alludes to the Mekong river delta, Vietnam, the area where the organization served, and also relates to the motto “Shield of the Mekong.” The colors blue, red, and yellow symbolize the three basic combat branches incorporated in airmobile warfare: infantry (highly mobile ground troops delivered to their objective by air); artillery (aerial rockets and grenades, heavy firepower delivered from the air); and cavalry (speed and mobility). The vertical winged sword and the three colors also allude to “13,” the battalion's numerical designation. The blue bar further refers to the Presidential Unit Citation awarded to the organization.

Description: A gold distinctive insignia consisting of a pair of black upright wings, with tips forming an arch at the top, and conjoined in base, enclosing and supporting a white cone, apex at the top, charged with two red horizontal bars, and above the cone three blue stars one above two in triangle, and on a gold scroll encircling the sides and base of the wings the inscription "Proud and Professional" in blue letters.

Symbolism: The uplifted supporting wings and stars denote the readiness and capability of the battalion to perform its mission. The unit's activation at Fort Lewis, Washington, is indicated by the red bars on the white background and the stars which allude to the coat of arms of George Washington for whom the state was named. The black wings refer to the state bird, the willow goldfinch, and the white cone indicates the mountains of Washington. The bars and wings also allude to the numerical designation of the battalion.

COAT OF ARMS

Shield: Azure, in saltire a lightning flash or and a wing elevated and displayed argent.

Crest: On a wreath of the colors, argent and azure, and issuing from behind a representation of “Diamond Head” sable a winged oriental demi-dragon rampant with wings addorsed or armed and garnished gules langued and spined vert bearing on the sinister wing a mullet of five points of the like.

Motto: Lele Makou No Na Puali (We Fly for the Troops).

Symbolism: Teal blue and yellow were formerly used for aviation units. The eagle’s wing over the lightning flash represents the aviation surveillance and direction over the penetration, speed, and firepower of the 25th Infantry Division. “Diamond Head” is emblematic of Oahu, Hawaii, the unit’s home and place of activation. The red and gold dragon alludes to the Republic of Vietnam where the organization participated in twelve campaigns receiving seven decorations represented by the star. “Diamond Head” also simulates a delta, a star traditionally identifies a capital city; together they refer to the Saigon and delta areas in Vietnam and the organization’s two Valorous Unit Awards. The red delineation and claws represent the two Meritorious Unit Commendations awarded the unit. The colors gold and red denote the awards of the Republic of Vietnam Cross of Gallantry with Palm, and the red and green represent the Republic of Vietnam Civil Action Honor Medal, First Class.

Shield: Argent, on a fess wavy azure between in chief four caltrops fesswise sable and in base a powder horn of the like, a bezant.

Crest: That for the regiments and separate battalions of the Connecticut, Massachusetts, and Florida Army National Guard, placed on center, and on dexter and sinister underneath, in the order in which the states were admitted to the Union:

Connecticut: On a wreath of the colors, argent and azure, a grape vine supported and fructed proper.

Massachusetts: On a wreath of the colors, argent and azure, a dexter arm embowed, clothed blue and ruffed white, proper the hand grasping a broad sword argent the pommel and hilt or.

Florida: On a wreath of the colors, argent and azure, an alligator statant proper.

Motto: Faith, Flight, Fidelity.

Symbolism: The wavy blue band, symbolizing water, and the yellow disc, taken from the shoulder sleeve insignia of the New England defense sector, allude to the battalion’s mission in the early part of World War II. The four caltrops, an ancient weapon, allude to the four battle honors received for service in Northern France, Rhineland, Ardennes-Alsace, and Central Europe. The caltrops, simulating aircraft, further allude to the organization’s present designation as an aviation battalion. The powder horn, taken from the arms of the 181st Infantry, refers to the organization of which it was an element in World War II.

DISTINCTIVE INSIGNIA

Shield: Azure, a base indented or, on the first a lightning flash point to base of the last and a winged sword consisting of a blade point to chief argent, hilt of the second and for quillons a pair of wings conjoined displayed inverted of the third, all saltirewise.

Crest: On a wreath of the colors, or and azure, a quiver of three arrows of the first, flighted gules in front of a circlet of stylized rice stalks gold.

Motto: Challenge.

Symbolism: The sword and wings represent the effective power of the battalion's aerial weapons and organic fire support. The quillons (cross guard) composed of wings refer to the unit's basic aviation mission and also allude to its assignment to the 101st Airborne Division. The lightning flash indicates the speed and shock effect of air assault operations, and the peaks refer to the mountainous area of Fort Carson, Colorado, where the unit was activated. The sword blade, five-segmented hilt, and cross guard with eight primary feathers allude to the numerical designation of the battalion.

The circlet of rice stalks and the colors yellow and red from the flag of the Republic of Vietnam allude to the unit's service there. The arrows refer to decorations awarded the battalion in Vietnam, and the quiver is also symbolic of the basic mission of the unit in moving combat troops and weaponry.

Crest: On a wreath of the colors, or and azure, in front of a wreath of laurel tied in base with a ribbon of the first striped of five gules, a pair of dragon wings conjoined in leure of the like enclosing at center a cross patty gold.

Motto: Up Tight.

Symbolism: The cougar, noted for ferocity and cunning and a symbol of strength and mobility, refers to the battalion’s mission of swift and decisive engagement of the enemy. In addition, the use of the cougar commemorates the battalion’s first commander, Lieutenant Colonel Leslie, from the state of Montana where the cougar, also known as a mountain lion, is often encountered. The peaks formed by the zigzag lines allude to the unit’s high standards as expressed in its motto. Light blue (celeste) represents the sky, ultramarine blue is traditionally associated with aviation units, and gold is for achievement and zeal. The dragon wings symbolize the unit’s service in Vietnam, and scarlet signifies the award of the Meritorious Unit Commendation. The wreath represents award of the Republic of Vietnam Civil Action Honor Medal, First Class. The ribbon tie and the cross patty indicate five awards of the Republic of Vietnam Cross of Gallantry with Palm. The points of the wings refer to the unit’s participation in thirteen campaigns during the Vietnam War.

DISTINCTIVE INSIGNIA (BADGE)

Description: A silver distinctive insignia consisting of a gray triangle with extended silver wings in front of a blue circle charged in upper portions with two silver lightning flashes, pierced above the wings on either side, all behind a black triangle with barbed points, surmounted by a silver cobra poised to strike, in base a silver scroll with blue backing looped over extreme ends of gray triangle, pierced in center and bearing the inscription “Search and Destroy” in black letters.

Symbolism: The cobra rising up over the black background represents the constant hovering strike capabilities of the battalion with emphasis on night operations. The barbed triangle represents the unit’s three primary capabilities: reconnaissance, surveillance, and attack. The battalion was organized in 1967 from personnel of the provisional “Phantom Battalion” with three surveillance companies and one helicopter company. The gray delta shape (gray ghost) alludes to the “Phantom Battalion”; the silver wings represent the historical background of the unit’s airplane companies; and the cobra refers to the armed helicopter company. The lightning flashes on the blue circle refer to the battalion’s speed in communications and continuous alertness in carrying out its mission.

DISTINCTIVE INSIGNIA (BADGE)

Description: A silver distinctive insignia consisting of an orange tri-blade aeropropeller with one blade up, and issuing from its hub, three arrowheads, one between each blade, on a dark blue area that is inclosed above by an arched nebuly, passing behind the vertical blade across the top and con­­joining the upper terminals of a light blue V-shaped scroll passing over the blades, and inscribed on the left “BLADES” and on the right “OF FORCE” in silver.

Symbolism: Ultramarine blue and golden orange are the colors used for aviation. The propeller and nebuly are symbolic of aircraft. They, along with the arrowheads, represent military preparedness and leadership and indicate the overall mission and capabilities of the unit. The scroll, in the form of a Roman numeral V, refers to the Fifth U.S. Army area, the historical home area of the unit.

COAT OF ARMS

Shield: Azure within an annulet argent enveloped by wings inverted or, an eagle’s head erased of the second emitting from its eye a flash overall to base in pale tennes fimbriated of the second.

Crest: None approved.

Motto: The Warding Eye.

Symbolism: Teal blue is the color formerly used for aviation units. All design elements allude to the mission of the unit. The annulet is symbolic of a lens and refers to reconnaissance, aerial observation and surveillance as well as representing armor (a link of chain mail). The wings represent aviation, aerial transport, and (around the annulet) aerial photography. The flash, in the colors of the Signal Corps, refers to communication functions. The eagle’s head alludes to the keen vision and high standards of the unit.

COAT OF ARMS

Shield: Per chevron dovetailed argent and sable, in chief a pair of wings conjoined azure and in base two lightning flashes chevronwise tenné fimbriated of the first.

Crest: None approved.

Motto: First to Know.

Symbolism: Ultramarine blue is the color used by aviation units, and with white alludes to the sky and the clouds. The black chevron represents armor as the spearhead of land assault and the dovetail partition suggests the close association of the aviation battalion with the armored elements of the division. The lightning flashes are symbolic of radio relay and radar surveillance.

Glossary of Lineage Terms

ACTIVATE. To bring into being or establish a unit that has been constituted. Usually personnel and equipment are assigned at this time; however, a unit may be active at zero strength, that is, without personnel or equipment. This term was not used before 1921. It is never used when referring to Army National Guard units, and only since World War II has it been used in connection with Army Reserve units. (See also ORGANIZE.)

ALLOT. To assign a unit to one of the components of the United States Army. The present components of the Army are the Regular Army (RA), the Army National Guard (ARNG), and the Army Reserve (AR), which was formerly known as the Organized Reserves and the Organized Reserve Corps. During World War I units were also allotted to the National Army, and during World War II to the Army of the United States. A unit may be withdrawn from any component except the Army National Guard and allotted to another. The new allotment, however, does not change the history, lineage, and honors of the unit.

ASSIGN. To make a unit part of a larger organization and place it under that organization's command and control until it is relieved from the assignment. As a rule, only divisional and separate brigade assignments are shown in unit lineages.

CONSOLIDATE. To merge or combine two or more units into one new unit. The new unit may retain the designation of one of the original units or it may have a new designation, but it inherits the history, lineage, and honors of all of the units affected by the merger. In the nineteenth century, consolidation was frequently a merger of several understrength units to form one full-strength unit. At the present time, in the Regular Army and the Army Reserve, units are usually consolidated when they are inactive or when only one of the units is active; therefore, personnel and equipment are seldom involved. In the Army National Guard, on the other hand, active units are often consolidated, and their personnel are combined in the new unit.

CONSTITUTE. To place the designation of a new unit on the official rolls of the Army.

CONVERT. To transfer a unit from one branch of the Army to another, for example, from infantry to armor. Such a move always requires a redesignation, with the unit adopting the name of its new branch; however, there is no break in the historical continuity of the unit. If the unit is active, it must also be reorganized under a new table of organization and equipment (TOE).

DEMOBILIZE. To remove the designation of a unit from the official rolls of the Army. If the unit is active, it must also be inactivated. This term is used in unit lineages only when referring to the period during and immediately after World War I. (For other periods, see DISBAND.)

DESIGNATION. The official title of a unit, consisting usually of a number and a name.

DISBAND. To remove the designation of a unit from the official rolls of the Army. If the unit is active, it must also be inactivated.
ELEMENT. A unit that is assigned to or part of a larger organization. (See also ORGANIC ELEMENT.)

INACTIVATE. To place a unit that is not currently needed in an operative status without assigned personnel or equipment. The unit's designation, however, is retained on the rolls of the Army, and it can be reactivated whenever needed. Its personnel and equipment are reassigned to one or more active units, but its organizational properties and trophies are put in storage. When the unit is activated again, it is assigned new personnel and equipment, but it keeps its old history, honors, and organizational properties and trophies. This term has been used only since 1921. Before that time, units either remained active or were removed from the rolls of the Army.

ORDER INTO ACTIVE MILITARY SERVICE. To place an Army Reserve unit on full-time active duty usually during a war or a major crisis, such as the Berlin crisis of 1961–62. After completing its active duty, the unit may be inactivated or it may be released from active military service, reverting to reserve status. This phrase does not apply to Army Reserve units on annual active duty training.

ORGANIC ELEMENT. A unit that is an integral part of a larger organization, for example, a lettered company of a battalion or regiment.

ORGANIZE. To assign personnel and equipment to a unit and make it operative, that is, capable of performing its mission.

RECONSTITUTE. To restore to the official rolls of the Army a unit that has been disbanded or demobilized. The reconstituted unit may have a new designation, but it retains its former history, lineage, and honors.

REDESIGNATE. To change a unit's official name or number or both. Redesignation is a change of title only; the unit's history, lineage, and honors remain the same. Active as well as inactive units can be redesignated, but personnel and equipment of an active unit are not changed unless it is reorganized at the same time.

REORGANIZE. To change the structure of a unit in accordance with a new table of organization and equipment (TOE), or to change from one type of unit to another within the same branch of the Army, for example, from mechanized to airborne infantry. (For reorganizations involving a new branch, see CONVERT.) When referring to the Army National Guard, however, this term also means to organize an active unit again.

TRANSFER LESS PERSONNEL AND EQUIPMENT. To move a unit from one place to another without its personnel and equipment. The transfer is, therefore, merely a move on paper. The unit is usually reorganized at its new location with newly assigned personnel and equipment, but it retains its own lineage, honors, and organizational properties and trophies. The original personnel and equipment are reassigned to one or more units.

The U.S. Army Center of Military History

The Center of Military History prepares and publishes histories as required by the U.S. Army. It coordinates Army historical matters, including historical properties, and supervises the Army museum system. It also maintains liaison with public and private agencies and individuals to stimulate interest and study in the field of military history. The Center is located at 20 Massachusetts Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20314-0200.
